Mrs Hitchen

Just wanted to say a big thank you for all her hard work with the dance group towards the performance at Crewe Lyceum. She put in lots of time after school and the dancing from the pupils was brilliant.

thank you

Mr Mackin

He is a very nice and polite man who can make anyone laugh. As well as being a very funny man, he can also teach very well.

Mr Kelsall

He always makes a boring lesson fun and he is the person me and my friends always come to when we have problems. We all owe him a massive thanks.

Mrs Owen

She is just incredibly nice and will make our lessons fun. She brightens up the room with her amazing smile. I feel happy when I walk into the classroom and I am always interested in the topics she picks out for our RMS lessons.

Miss Hargreaves

She always makes me laugh in lesson, she is very kind to everyone during class and she is a very nice person in general. She makes lessons very easy to understand.

A SMALL ACT OF KINDNESS CAN GO A LONG WAY.

Thank a teacher

From your lovely feedback last year parents and students have suggested a way to nominate a teacher to recognise them for an act of kindness, support or hard work.

If any student or parent would like to anomalously recognise a teacher then please use the link to fill out the form.

Mpox virus sparks global health alert

Is our abuse of the planet to blame? The first case of a more spreadable strain of mpox has been detected in the UK. Some think climate change has fuelled its spread.

A storm is brewing. In the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC), mpox — a contagious disease spread by human contact — is spreading more rapidly than ever before.

There have been more than 42,000 recorded cases in Africa so far this year, more than all of 2023. The virus has moved from the DRC to 13 neighbouring countries.¹ On Wednesday evening, the UK Health Security Agency announced the first case of the new variant in Britain, adding, however, that the risk to the UK population remains low.

In August, the World Health Organisation (WHO) declared mpox a public health emergency.

WHO outbreak leader Maria Van Kerkhove said: "The time [to act] is now." We must defeat the disease before it spreads further.

Mpox is closely related to smallpox.² It has flu-like symptoms. But its most notable outward sign is a skin rash. Some sufferers develop sores over their whole body. A human case was first recorded in 1970 in the DRC.

Most patients recover. But it can prove fatal. There have been 460 recorded deaths this year so far in Africa.

Is our abuse of the planet to blame?

Bad harvest

Yes: We reap what we sow. As temperatures rise, summers extend and forests fall, infectious diseases crop up in newly warmer locations. The links are obvious. To ignore it is a form of climate change denial.

Doctors believe this spread is due to Clade 1b, a mutant variant that can spread through short contact, especially among young children.

All infectious diseases come from an interaction between our bodies and the environment. The plague was spread by a bacteria that lives in fleas, which themselves live on rodents.³ Medieval Europe's rat-ridden cities provided the perfect breeding ground.

Many scientists believe that our changing planet is making disease worse. Environmental activists have begun to use the term One Health to describe the connectedness between humans, other living things and the planet. Our actions affect other beings and they affect us.

Warmer winters and longer summers are causing insect-based diseases to flourish. Ticks, which spread Lyme disease, have begun to spread further north and be active over a longer period of time.

Changes in rain patterns and water temperature can affect the spread of waterborne diseases such as E. coli, which has recently been spotted in London and Paris.

Others think that the connection is less clear. Climate change is complex and connected to many other processes. It is hard to find just one cause for an outbreak.

No: Disease featured in human history long before global warming and will exist after we are gone. Climate change offers a convenient excuse for some outbreaks. But the true picture is even darker. Sickness is always with us.

Or... Blame is a strong word. There is almost certainly a relationship between our changing environment and the spread of illness. But the illnesses are often unwanted side effects of things done to improve lives. And cause and effect are rarely clear.

1. These include Burundi, Kenya, Rwanda and Uganda.
2. One of the most deadly diseases in human history. The WHO's Donald Henderson reported that estimated 300 million people died of it over the 20th Century alone. It was eradicated by 1980.
3. And on humans: recent research has found that the plague was likely also spread by fleas that lived on people.

Cooperation: Cooperation, in its simplest form, means working together with someone or doing what they ask. It can also refer to the act of working with another company, organisation, or country to achieve a shared goal. In essence, it's a collaborative effort to achieve mutual benefit.

International Day of Co-operatives 5 July 2025. (Theme: Build a better world)

The British Co-operative Society- now a worldwide model (Other retailers are available!)

PHOTOGRAPH OF THIRTEEN OF THE ORIGINAL MEMBERS OF THE ROCHDALE EQUITABLE PIONEERS' SOCIETY.

The Co-operative Movement across the world has its roots in the Lancashire textile town of Rochdale, England, where, in 1844, harsh living conditions and inadequate consumer protection - the adulteration of food by private traders was widespread - prompted 28 working men to adopt a new approach to the supply of food and other goods and the provision of social and educational facilities for ordinary working people by setting up a retail Co- operative society, the Rochdale Equitable Pioneers Society. Those 28 men scraped together a meagre capital and opened a shop in Toad Lane, where they sold wholesome food at reasonable prices. A share of the profit or surplus as they preferred to call it, was returned to members in proportion to their purchases - the famous Co-operative dividend or "divi". The Pioneers and other early Co-operators owed much of their inspiration to the Co-operative writings of Dr William King, a Brighton physician and philanthropist, and Robert Owen, a Welsh manufacturer and social reformer. From the decisions and practices of the pioneers, based on the Owenite theories of co-operation, the Rochdale Principles of Co-operation were formulated. These included: voluntary and open membership; democratic control - one member, one vote; payment of limited interest on capital; surplus allocated in proportion to members' purchases - the dividend; and educational facilities for members and workers.

There were earlier societies, but even those that survived came to adopt the Rochdale pattern of co-operation as the best means of operating a Co-operative society and fulfilling its aims. Rochdale became a model for the formation of similar Co-operative societies throughout the United Kingdom and around the World.

In conventional retail outlets, stores or shops are owned by corporations or individuals with management and decision making controlled by the owners. Their primary goal is to generate profits for the owners/shareholders.
